VOL. VII.

EDMONTON, ALBERTA, SATURDAY, JULY 17TH, 1886.

No. 37.

TELEGRAPHIC.

WINNIPEG, July 14, 1886.

Hon. John Carling will shortly visit the North-West.

The Clemow company has been given the North-West Central railway charter.

Several anti-Scott act outrages of a gross character are reported from Ontario.

There have been some Orange riots in Ireland lately in which the military interfered.

The knights of Pythias parade in Toronto was a great success. Six thousand men were in line.

The C. P. R. Co. has decided to discharge the engineer and fireman of the second through train which was so badly wrecked in the Selkirk mountains. It is believed the accident could have been avoided.

It is stated on excellent authority that Dewdney will be given another term of five years as lieutenant-governor of the territories. It is also stated that Hayter Reed will be appointed Indian commissioner and that Mr. McGirr of the Regina Indian office will succeed Mr. Reed as assistant commissioner.

The British election returns up to midnight were, conservatives and unionists 365, Gladstonians 241. Gladstone is expected to resign. He will hold a conference with his colleagues on Saturday. The Parnellites say they will never accept Hartington's scheme and will fight and wait until they have secured the passage of the full Gladstone measure. In a speech which foreshadowed the conservative policy Sir Michael Hicks-Beach said that their first act would be to suppress the Irish national league and suspend the Irish obstructionists.

Sir John Macdonald's reception yesterday was entirely informal. Large crowds were at the depot and there was considerable cheering. He is in good health, but a little lame from sciatica. He was greatly pleased with the trip so far, and was particularly impressed with the grandeur of the scenery and the stupendous character of the work north of Lake Superior. Yesterday he was receiving visitors. To night he will receive the corporation addresses. Tomorrow he will visit southern Manitoba and on Friday will leave for the west, going through to the Pacific coast. He will probably make short stays at Regina and Banff en route. On his return he will visit Macleod, spend a week in Winnipeg and go east via the lakes.

WINNIPEG, July 15, 1886.

A new extradition treaty between England and the United States has been signed.

Sanford Fleming, who is in England, will it is reported confer with the imperial and Australian governments in connection with the establishment of cable communication between Canada, Japan and Australia.

Serious prairie fires are raging along the boundary in the Wood Mountain district. The police and ranchmen are trying to prevent their coming north. Unless checked the entire country east and south of the Saskatchewan will be swept.

The total votes polled up to the present time in the British elections are, unionists 1,399,623, Gladstonians 1,320,648. At midnight the totals elected were: conservatives and unionists 386, Gladstonians 252. The conservatives and unionists now estimate the final result as follows: conservatives 322, liberal unionists 73, Gladstonians 188, Parnellites 86.

There was a large gathering at the skating rink last evening on the occasion of the presentation of the civic address to Sir John A. Macdonald. The reception was very enthusiastic. Sir John in replying to the address referred to the pride he felt in the completion of the C. P. R., and to being able to take a trip over it in his life time, as at one time he thought he would only be able to look down upon it from above. He dwelt upon the great importance of the opening of the road and the expected development of trade with Australia and Asia. When he was in England last winter the Marquis of Salisbury was at the head of the government and Sir John had taken occasion to see him for the purpose of inducing that government to aid in the establishing of the first line of steamers connecting British Columbia with Hong Kong and Japan. He was glad to say that the premier of England had so convinced himself that he said he would lay the matter before his colleagues at an early date and if they should agree that liberal assistance would be given by the government. It was agreed by the British government that liberal assistance would be given—that a subsidy should be given to establish as fast and as fine a line of steamers as could be built to connect Hong Kong with British Columbia. They were to be approved of by the British admiralty and were to carry guns and in case of war act as transports. The C. P. R. Co. offered to carry Her Majesty's mail's, troops and munitions of war at as cheap a rate as possible. So anxious had that government been to carry out this scheme that they left a memorandum behind them to inform their successors what they would have done had they remained in power. From the result of the late elections in England it was very likely that Lord Salisbury would return to power or that the Marquis of Hartington would succeed. In either case no doubt the undertaking of the government in January last would be carried out and a line of steamers as substantial as could be built, and built as rapidly as modern naval construction would allow, would be running next year. He also alluded to the Hudson's Bay railway, the mention of which called forth great cheering. While difficulties would be experienced in floating the scheme in England, he had no doubt after the experience of the Canadian Pacific that they would be overcome.

There the teams took them up and proceeded to the grove, where they arrived about 11:30. The weather was all that could be desired. The committee of management had put up swings and cut a road to the lake, upon which a boat was lying waiting for the party. At 1 o'clock dinner was served. About 70 children gathered around the table to enjoy the good things that had been provided by the friends of the schools. A second table was required to supply all the grown people. After dinner the programme was opened consisting of swinging, boating, foot racing, etc. About six o'clock children and grown people all gathered around the table for tea, well pleased with the day's outing. The north bank of the Red Deer at the ferry is low and an easy grade has been made up the high hill on the south side. From the Red Deer the road runs due south eighteen miles to its junction with the old trail, passing close to the western base of the Cree hill. This part of the road is level and dry. Three creeks cross it but these have been bridged by Mr. Mackenzie. It is claimed for this new road that it is dryer, more level and about nine miles shorter than the present one.

EDMONTON BULLETIN, JULY 17, 1886.

The rumored appointment of Hayter Reed as Indian commissioner for the North-West will doubtless be generally satisfactory. Mr. Reed has been assistant-commissioner for several years, and if he has been fully qualified for that position, with the experience thus gained he should be fully capable of now discharging the duties of commissioner. It is possible that there may be other men in and out of the service who are better qualified, but the system of graded promotion is a good one, and where it is acted on should be commended. But if this system should be pursued in the case of the commissioner there is no reason why it should be departed from in that of the assistant-commissioner. Mr. McGillivray may be fully qualified for the position, but should not receive it before his turn. By all rights of seniority and position in the service as well as practical experience with all the workings of the department and with the Indians themselves Mr. Wadsworth, inspector of Indian farms and agencies, is entitled to the position of assistant-commissioner. When the principle of graded promotion is departed from in the one instance the inference is easily drawn that it did not really govern in the other.

The resignation of assistant-commissioner Crozier from the mounted police is a matter of considerable public consequence. The police are charged with the important duty of maintaining law and order in the territories and upon the character and ability of the officers depends to a very great extent the quality of the service rendered. Major Crozier was a good officer, had been in the force from its organization and was second in command. The question is asked, what caused him to resign? And the answer naturally is that when the commissionership to which he was by rank and seniority entitled, was filled by an outsider he took it as an intimation that the authorities were not satisfied with the services which he had rendered, and being a man of spirit he declined to thrust those services upon them. It is possible that the new commissioner is well fitted for the position, but most people will agree that in exchanging a commanding officer of long experience for one of no experience the force has not been a gainer. The lack of a system of regular promotion in the force since its organization is one great reason why it is no better than it is to-day.

It has been frequently asserted against prohibition that it does not prohibit, and that in the nature of things it cannot. Of course a mere law on that as on any other subject can have no effect of itself. It provides machinery for a certain work, but power must be applied to move the machinery before the work can be done. If any proof were required that where the power is applied the machinery of the Scott act in the eastern provinces will do the work, the anti-Scott act outrages which are so frequently reported in the papers supply it. It has been repeatedly asserted that more liquor is sold and that there is more drunkenness under the Scott act than under an ordinary license system. This is probably true where the law is not enforced. But if it were also true where it is enforced what possible object would there be in perpetrating these outrages? If more liquor is sold and more drunk under the act than without it those who desire to sell and those who desire to drink would naturally welcome it instead of entering dynamite protests against it—unless indeed it is believed that the ministers, elders, deacons and church members who lead the van in the temperance cause have become dynamiters. There is no question that these outrages are perpetrated to prevent the enforcement of the law and no man would take the risk involved in their committal if its enforcement pandered to his interest or appetite. Each additional outrage is another proof that prohibition can and does prohibit.

The result of the British elections shows that a majority of the people are opposed to Irish home rule as proposed by Gladstone, but it does not by any means show that that majority is in favor of repeating in Ireland the scenes which have been enacted there at intervals during the past seven hundred years, which have been the prime cause of the demand for home rule, and which if repeated in this day and age would certainly bring it about in its worst possible form and with its worst possible consequences. The liberal unionists by whose help the home rule proposition has been defeated, did not vote with the conservatives because they wished to see Irishmen deprived of their rights as British subjects, as Sir Michael Hicks-Beach suggests, any more than at the former elections the Parnellites voted on the same side for similar reasons. The question between the two bodies of liberals is, shall Ireland take a step backward in its condition as a dependency or a step forward as an integral part of the United Kingdom? while the question between the conservatives and both bodies of liberals is, shall or shall not Ireland and the Irish be accorded such beneficial legislation as the circumstances require? The conservative idea as set forth by Sir Michael Hicks-Beach is, keep Ireland as a dependency and its people as not entitled to the rights of British subjects. The Gladstone idea is, keep Ireland as a dependency and grant its people such concessions as shall as far as possible compensate them for remaining in that condition. The liberal-unionist idea is, sweep away all legislative distinctions between Ireland and its people and the rest of Britain, and afterwards legislate for Ireland not as a separate, a hostile, or a dependent country, but as part and parcel of Britain itself. A few months ago the conservatives undertook to coerce Ireland with the help of the Parnellites who then held the balance of power, and they are not likely to come any nearer their object with the help of the unionists who hold the balance of power now.

The Travis investigation at Calgary has demonstrated pretty thoroughly that the excitement against the judge last winter was raised by bad men through worse means for the vilest purposes. Most people will prefer that the law shall continue to be administered by Judge Travis rather than by a judge under the control of or desirous of pandering to these parties. To secure such a judge is been the object of all the rumpus.

LOCAL.

J. M'AULEY of the H. B. Co., Cumberland district, arrived on Thursday, eight days out from Battleford. Mr. M'Auley was stationed at Edmonton some years ago.

A MEETING of members of the Edmonton volunteer company was held last evening in J. A. McDougall & Co's store to take action to secure scrip for the company; Capt. W. Stiff chairman, Sgt. C. F. Strang secretary, twenty-five members present. It was moved by C. F. Strang, seconded by M. McCauley and carried that the meeting appoint the following committee to draft a memorial to the government, stating the rights of the company to scrip, etc.: Capt. Stiff, C. F. Strang, M. McCauley, A. D. Osborne, H. C. Wilson. It was agreed by all present that a subscription list be opened and that each member subscribe $2 towards defraying the expenses incidental to drawing up the memorial and having the same placed properly before the government.

THE Canadian Handbook, compiled by Geo. Johnson of Ottawa and published by the department of agriculture for distribution at the Colonial and Indian exhibition, is a book of 160 pages, which contains a greater amount of valuable information about Canada, its climate, resources, trade, government, people, history and prospects than was ever before compressed into so small a space. It is comprehensive, clear, concise and no doubt accurate, and contains the information that every Canadian should have. Two maps go with the book, one showing the position and proportionate area of Canada in the British empire, and the other showing Canada itself with its agricultural, forest and mineral areas indicated. The maps are very much inferior to the book and are got up with the apparent intention of showing that Canada is built around the Pacific railway, instead of the railway being built through and by Canada.

SCRIP payment was begun at St. Albert on Monday and has been in progress all week. It will not be concluded until some time next week. The issue does not progress very rapidly. The classes of claims are similar to those at Edmonton, with the addition that two or three original white settlers have been awarded scrip—men who came to the country fifty years ago in the H. B. Co. service. A large camp of Indians or rather treaty half-breeds from the neighboring reserves is near by awaiting a decision regarding their request for scrip. A dozen beer saloons adorn the grounds, and a lively trade is done in everything that can be sold or bought. Horse and foot racing and betting have been rife all week, but it is impossible to give a report of the numerous events, whose importance lay in the fact that Edmonton and St. Albert bet against each other on them. The scrip buyers are on hand in full force and scrip goes chiefly at from 70 to 75 cts and sometimes reaching 80 cts. on the dollar. A great deal of the scrip issued is to heirs of deceased persons. On Monday one man received $760 cash for scrip which he had become heir to.

N. P. NELSEN and Geo. Bourk have returned to Fort Saskatchewan from their prospecting trip. They explored from a point twenty-five miles below the crossing of the McLeod river to the head of its north fork and thence into the mountains and across the divide to the Athabasca, and found good indications of gold and gold bearing quartz, but nothing to pay. They found placer diggings on the McLeod a failure as the gold was too light. They had to return to Edmonton owing to the swamping of their raft on the McLeod, by which they lost most of their provisions. They report the country almost impassible from heavy timber and brush. They were four months on the round trip. They are strongly of the opinion that the country is rich in minerals, gold and gold bearing quartz being found on many of the creeks, but it will take a good deal of time and capital to make a thorough exploration. The prospectors speak highly of the Iroquois Indians whom they met in the foot hills. They are busy hunting and are prosperous but game is scarce. Nelsen shot one black bear. Mountain trout weighing six to eight pounds are swarming in the McLeod. The McLeod and Pembina have both been low all season. Nelsen and Bourk met Philadeau and Morris 20 miles west of Lac Ste. Anne on their way back to the McLeod to mine.
